Women,s Club Honor Dr.King's Birthday

FREE AT LAST... FREE AT LAST
THANK GOD ALMIGHTY
I'M FREE AT LAST...
I'VE TRIED TO LOVE AND SERVE HUMANITY
AWARDED - THE L PEACE PRIZE '64
Martin Luther King JR.
He made the greatest sacrifice while battling bigotry.
For, with his life he paid the price so mankind could be free.
The obstacles that formed his plight he fought to overcome.
With all his heart he vowed to fight for all, not just for some.
Though insurmountable the odds, with inner strength he trod.
For, in his mind the will was God's, and right gave might instil.
He felt the sting of many blows quite often he was jailed.
But time and time again he rose to show he hadn't failed!
The fire within him always raged to break the shackling chains.
And fiercely was the struggle waged in hopes of gracing gains.

Legislature & State Justice Honor King

There were resolution and salutes in the state capital yesterday to commemorate the memory of Martin Luther King Jr.

Newly elected Rep. Jesse Wineberry of Seattle promised to introduce legislation to make King's birthday a holiday for state employees as well as for public school students in Wa.

Sen . George fleming, Jim McDermott and Lorraine Wojahn introduced a resolution in the upper chamber similar to Wineberry's.

The state Supreme Court opened its new term yesterday with a tribute to King by attorney Lem Howell and by Charles Smith of the University of Washington Law School.

Evans Says Proposal On BPA Would Trigger Depression In The N.W.

An Office of Management and Budget (OMB) proposal to double the revenue requirement of the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) is "ludicrous and a serious threat to the ratepayers and economy of the Northwest," according to Senator Daniel J. Evans (R-WA).

In a news conference in Washington, D.C. Evans said he has told OMB Director David Stockman and Energy Secretary Donald Hodel that he is deeply concerned about the proposal to put the BPA on a fixed repayment schedule and to raise rates on all the older, low interest loans.

"The BPA repayment plan is on schedule and in complete compliance with the law. It's not broken so it doesn't need to be fixed," Evans said. BPA's total debt to the U.S. Treasury for construction of the extensive Columbia River hydroelectric dam system will be $8.2 billion as of 1987. It anticipates no problem with making its schedule payment of $226 million on the principal and $398 million i intreest this year.

"It appears that OMB is looking for $1.14 billion more in BPA revenues - $590 million in 1986 and $550 million in 1987. That would bring BPA's total revenue contribution to $2.36 billion for those two years," Evans explained. "This may look good on paper as a deficit reduction item. Unfortunately,, it doesn't recognize the complete infeasibility of the plan."

Evans, who sits on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, was the chairman of the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council prior to joining the Senate.

Evans said if OMB's plan were put into effect, we estimate that nine of the ten aluminum plants in the region would close, putting 7,200 people out of work. The indirect impact on aluminum-related industries would cost another 15,885 jobs. The rate increases that would drive aluminum out of the region also would be expected to directly and indirectly impact another 45,000 jobs in the industrial chemical, food processing, pulp and paper and, logging industries.

"The Northwest already has sustained the closure of more than 100 lumber and plywood mills over the last four years, putting 45,000 people out of work," Evans added. "The unemployment rate in the State of WA. in 1984 averaged 9.7 percent compared with a national average of 7.5 percent. We're clearly in the back of the packon the road to economic recovery. "I'm convinced OMB's proposal would put us on a dead-end detour."

I'm confident that President Reagan and OMB, knowing these facts, would not move ahead to unnecessarily cripple the Northwest," Evans concluded.

World Apartheid

World apartheid must go, not only in South Africa but also in the U.S. where there are laws that are unequal.

President Reagan led the nation in the celebration of the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. Many of the speakers combined praises for the Slain Civil Rights Leader with attacks on the apartheid policies of South Africa.

Schools and Government Offices were closed in many areas in tribute to the nobel Peace Prize Winner, whose birthday will become a Federal Holiday next year.

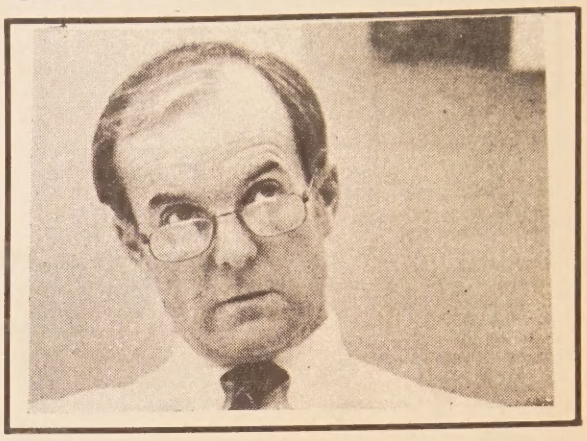
Reagan issued a statement calling King "a deeply respected leader of international statue who helped lead an extraordinary revolution in America's laws and customs."

Local Administrator Attends International Gathering.

Mr. Tom Tomlinson, Managing Director of Pantages Centre, recently returned from the 18th Annual Conference of the Association of Coolege, University and Community Arts Administrators, held December 15-19 in New York City. The international conference is the largest of its kind for people who administer inter-disciplinary performing arts programs in the United States and Canada.

This year's conference featured experts in all facets of arts administration and development, from publicity and promotion, to programming experimental art, to computer operations. There was an emphasis tnis year on the importance of arts advocacy and the implications of recent studies on consumer behavior in the arts. Four major speakers emphasized that theme, and other issues of importance as well:

Gardner Sworn In As Washington 19th Governor



In his inagural address, Gardner listed high-quality public education and a healthy economy as the key challenges facing State Government. He also called for State Government to identify and crack down on pollution.

Gardner, who is a mix of the average man and the wealthy eccentic, has touched the public and Republicans are beginning to show a fondness for Gardner that goes beyond the pleasantries and exchange of wisecracks.

One top offical said Gardner was reaching out to people, something Spellman never did.

March For Life.

New Program For Students With Leadership Abilities.

The Tacoma Community College Board of Trustees yesterday learned about a new program which will provide leadership training for outstanding first and second year students.

The Student Access to Growth and Earning (STAGE), program will provide leadership training and campus job opportunities for 10 qualified TCC students entering from local high schools Fall 1984, said Tom Keegan, dRiector of Student Programs. The program will recruit high school students who have demonstrated high academic achievement and leadership experience. Selection will be based on an interview and application process, Keegan said.

The new program will provide students with a complete leadership training experience, an opportunity to put leadership training to use through an on-campus job, an opportunity to belong to a high-energy, positive group of students and practical employment training and experience designed to aid in career choices and options, Keegan said.

Keegan noted that a total of 17 students wil be involved in the program by Fall, 1986.

HAVE YOU BELIEVE OUR REPORT?
SERIES #47
ISAIAH 53: 1&2

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?
For he shall grow up before him as a root out of dry ground.
He hath no form nor comiliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

WORDS OF WISDOM
Job 36: 1-21

Elihu also proceeded, and said,
Suffer me a little, and I will shew thee that I have yet to speak on God's behalf.
I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ascribe righteousness to my Maker.
For truly my words shall not be false: he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee.
Behold, God is mighty, and despiseth not any: he is mighty in strength and wisdom.
He preserveth not the life of the wicked: but giveth right to the poor.
He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but with ings are they on the throne; yea, he doth establish them for ever, and they are exalted.
And if they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction;
Then he sheweth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded.
He openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return form iniquity.
If they obey and serve him, they shall spend their days in prosperity, and their years in pleasures.
but if they obey not, they shall perish by the sword, and they shall die without knowledge.
But the hypocrites in heart heap up wrath: they cry not when he blindeth them.
They die in youth, and their life is among the unclean.
He delivereth the poor in his affliction, and openeth their ears in oppression.
Even so would he have removed thee out of the strait into a broad place, where there is no straitness; and that which should be set on thy table should be full of fatness.
But thou hast fulfilled the judgment of wicked: judgment and justice take hold on thee.
Because there is wrath, beward lest he take thee away with his stroke: then a great ransom cannot deliver thee.
Will he esteem thy riches? no, not gold, nor all the forces of strength.
Desire not the night, when people are cut off in their place.

Children Of Death.

Talking with children about death and about dying is something many adults choose to avoid. Often they shy away from it on the pretext that its "too much" for the children, or the presumption they won't understand. In reality, they may be trying to deny it themselves, hoping not to confront their own grief. And so they whisk away dead pets and replace them in the hope that the old ones won't be missed. They dismiss family deaths with fanciful tales of long rips or deep slumber; they whisper the tell-tale words when the children are nearby, or spell them out ("Grandpa D-I-E-D"), or avoid the subject completely.

But it's not only discussions about death that children are shielded from, they are also kept from the people who are dying, even those who are very close to them.

Several years ago, Judith Rubenstein, an educational consultant, and her husband, Dr. Howard Rubenstein, an internist and allergist, took their two children, ages 6 and 4, to chicago on a good-bye visit to their grandfather, even though they lived in different cities, they visited with him frequently. At the time, friends and family strongly objected to the visit. "Let them remember him the way he was". The Rubensteins disagreed. They believed that children have to learn that, however sad, sickness ending in death is apart of life. Human beings have a need to say good-bye when time shared is over, whether it is a short, social visit or life itself. Children can handle the visit. Anything which is mentionable, is manageable. Parents are mistaken when they think that death is a foreign concept to children. By the time children reach 15, they've seen thousands of deaths on TV.

What they don't see is, normal people's grief. They don't see crying. They don't see the way normal people handle each other. Show them.

Can You Cope With The Split Personality Of Your Skin?

Your face has a strange way of behaving. Why does your forehead look oily and your nose shine like a becon at the same moment that your cheeks feel dry and taut?

Skin is never the same all over your face. Each part of your face has a different job to do, protecting you, controlling your temperature, storing energy, lubricating you, and sensing the outside world.

Most of us have an oily T-Zone. Close to the scalp, more oils are secreted to keep our hair from being brittle. By contrast, our cheeks, which don't need to fold like the delicate skin on eyelids, or pucker, like the skin around the mouth, are thicker, dryer, and more protective.

Your skin's personality traits can also be exaggerated by what you do to it. for example, skin that feels slick may be dry underneath. And excessive toning can make matters worse. Then just how do you cope with your skin's natural split personality?

There's a remarkable beauty fluid which actually helps normalize the imbalance. It brings oily and dry areas into harmony, to give you smoother, softer, more even looking skin.

Come To Church Services

EZEKIEL 13: 1-9

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts, Hear ye the word of the Lord;

O Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts.

Ye have not gone up into the gaps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the Lord.

They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The Lord saith: and the Lord hath not seen them: and they have made others to hope that they would confirm the word.

Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination whereas ye say, The Lord saith it; albeit I have not spoken?

Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold I am against you, saith the Lord God.

Tony Brown's Comments

In response to his appearance on my television series, my office has received over 100 calls a day from viewers who want to know how to get "Dick Gregory's Bahamian Diet." The information, if you are one of those who may want to know, can be obtained by calling 1-800-543-1300.

But what has really thrilled me about the hundreds who called and are writing for transcripts is that there is such broad interest in nutrition. As Dick Gregory warns, fat--saturated fat-is a real villian.

I know that many Blacks have been raised on foods, loaded with fat and the taste of fats is psychologically synonymous with a "good" taste. But the overwhelming wisdom of the medical community is that high-fat, high-cholesterol eating habits reduce life.

About a year ago, the federal government released the results of the most expensive research project in medical history. It dealt with cholesterol, a dangerous substance in the bloodstream. The more cholesterol and fat in your diet, the more likely you are to have a heart attack.

Cholesterol clogs your arteries and they become brittle and hard and burst, much like the leaky pipes in your basement. Meats and cheeses supply you with a deadly amount of cholesterol. The saturated fat in bacon, beef, whole milk, or any food of animal origin as well as innocent sounding coconut and palm oil will produce the killer cholesterol in abundance. Butter, eggs and the fat under the skin of chicken are also deadly items. Which may be why butter consumption is down by 30 percent and eggs by 14 percent. And speaking of butter. You croissant lovers might want to know that one brand has 118 of the 200 calories in the form of butter.

Fish oils (EPA and DHA) do the exact opposite; they produce health and reduce cholesterol. But no oil is beneficial for frying foods. Bran also reduces cholesterol.

Needless to say, Blacks die at higher rates from their diets than do Whites and at younger ages. But nature may have given Blacks added protection against heart attacks protection that may have been squandered with an excessively fat diet.

One study found that around puberty, boys experience a 25 percent drop in their ability to keep their negative cholesterol levels low. Women, it was discovered, retain theirs--which may account for the fact that they have 60 percent fewer deaths from heart attacks than men.

It is also very possible that women suffer less from heart attacks due to fat because they are more diet conscious. But back to race and heart disease. The aforementioned study concluded that the drastic changes in boys at puberty are more drastic in White boys than in Black boys.

To Be Equal
By John Jacob

Corporate Equal Opportunity.

Equal employment opportunity is not something corporations do for minorities. It is something corporations must do for themselves in order to compete for talent.

Corporate America has been slow to realize this. It only began hiring blacks in appreciable numbers during the civil rights ferment in the 1960s. But it tended to see that hiring as social responsibility, not as sound business practice.

It takes anywhere from fifteen to twenty years for aggressive managers to work their way through line operating positions of increasing importance to finally enter the inner circle of senior executives. If corporate America had been serious about fully utilizing the new black talent it recruited in the 1960s, today we would be seeing large numbers of black vice presidents, senior and group vice presidents, and even CEOs.

But do not. That is because blacks hired in the sixtees were often shunted into EEO, into special markets, into the ghetto of designated "black" jobs that did not give them exposure to operating positions that constitute the corporate fast track to success. We now have large numbers of black managers who have reached a career plateau because they were denied those experiences.

Many are approaching retirement, and they will not be replaced by other blacks because their functions are being integrated into the general operations of the corporation. Today, most large companies can reach special markets without black specialists. They can implement EEO plans without black EEO managers.

The first generation of black achievers blazed an important trail. They helped their companies. They were role models for younger blacks.

They served honorably and well. They deserve better than the frustration of knowing that their blackness was a barrier to career growth and success Will their successors- the bright young black manager hired in the past five or ten years-- meet with similar frustrations? Is corporate America making the best use of their talents? Is it giving them the opportunities to run key enterprises -- to bring products to market -- to let their talent and their accomplishments take them to the top? The true test of corporate equal opportunity is not simply in the numbers of black managers; it is not solely quantity but quality.

If a company says it has X percent black managers that tells us little. where are those blacks? If they are buried in staff functions or in special markets we know the company is not fully living up to its equal employment obligations

If they are in production, sales, finance, and other traditional routes to the top, then we know the company is serious about EEO and serious about attracting top black achievers. Corporate America must go beyond its traditional conception of equal employment hiring to equal promotional opportunities and to grooming talented young black managers for line positions that lead to career ladders reaching to the pinnacle of corporate power. While white women have made great strides in recent years and may well penetrate the senior ranks of corporate executives within a short period of time, blacks have not made such gains

It is in the interests of blacks, of corporations of the naiton that they do so. An efficient, growth, economy needs the full talents of all, and that means equalizing opportunities for those who have been left out in the past.

THE HONORABLE GUS SAVAGE

Cuba Land Of Progress, Surprises (2nd Of Series.

Shortly after 5am. on Thursday, December 13, 1984, I arrived in Havana, Cuba, the first stop on my 10-day, fact-finding mission to Cuba and the troubled, small Central American nations of Nicaragua, El Savador and Guatemala.

Havana is a modern city of some 2 million industrious and friendly Spanish-speaking people. It winds along the northwestern coast of Cuba, only about a hundred miles south of Mianmi, Florida. Blessed with a bright, ideal climate, Havana lies on the southern shore of the Gulf of Mexico, close to where the Gulf quietly joins the Atlantic Ocean. Once a bustling, international resort and commercial center, it is the capital of the only Communist nation in the Western hemisphere.

Cuba is the largest island in the Caribbean Sea, almost 800 miles long, from east to west, though only 125 miles across at its widest, north to south point. The population of Cuba approaches 10 million, about three times that of Chicago. Approximately one-fourth of the nation's inhabitants are direct descendants to African slaves, one-third of white-Spanish origin, and the remainder fo racially mixed origin. However, compared with the U.S., race has litle or no significance.

While I noticed few Black among the political and military heirarchy, at a huge steel mill and foundry I visited on the second day of my stay on the island, half or more of the management and supervisory personnel whom I met were Black Additionally, among students and in the streets, social distinctions based upon race were not apparent.

As for its one-party form of government, Cuba is ruled by a highly disciplined Communist Party, under a popularly adopted constitution. To the extent that there is legislative power, it is rested in popularly elected national and local assemblies. Executive power belongs to a council of ministers. This council, as well as the Party and national assemly, is headed by the President, the charismatic and brilliant Marxist-Leninist, Fidel Castro, heroic leader of cuba's socialist revolution which propelled him into power in 1959.

I first met and chatted with Castro on the Friday night following my arrival in Havana, at a grand oficial reception for the visiting President of Ethiopia, who, incidentally, sincerely invited me to visit his drought-plagued country.

The next day, Saturday, I was granted a more than two-hour private audience with Castro, where we discussed many aspects of his country's internal development, as well as the areas of conflict with the U.S.

Although I had heard many stories about Castro's brilliance and charm I was not fully prepared for the extent of his relaxed and confident manner apparently undiminished despite the terrible pressures of the past 25 years.

However, regardless of Castro's courage and commitment to his socialist revolution, I left the meeting convinced that the Cuban President genuinely desires improved relations with the U.S. and is willing to take the lead in bringing this about.

My conviction is supported by the excitement created in Havana over the agreement concluded on the day after my arrival between the U.S. and Cuba. As many readers probably know, the agreement provides that Cuba will accept the return of 2,746 of the some 125,000 Cubans it permitted to leave for the U.S. in 1980, on the basis of a one-shot acceptance by the Carter administration.

The U.S. now wishes to expel the returnees because they are considered to be convicted criminals, mental patients and other hard-core social misfits who normally would be excluded under our immigrated laws. However, in a one-hour, 40-minute radio and television speech on the day of the agreement, Castro painstakenly and vehemently denied that the proposed returnees we as described by the U.S.

The agreement further provides that the U.S. will begin accepting Cuban immigrants normally, up to 20,000 per year from now on, plus 3,000 polital refugees in 1985.

The significance of the agreement is that, first of all, an official agreement negotiated between the two countries is a big step towards easing tensions. Also, it provides the Cuban government with a safety valve for those who wish to leave, many of whom are incurably profit-oriented and drawn by the lures and promises of America's capitalistic society.

Savage

Incidentally, Castro made a point in his speech of crediting Rev. Jesse Jackson, by name, with crucially contributing to the initiation of the negotiations. During Rev. Jackson's visit to Cuba last June, some will recall, he helped persuade Castro not to wait until the presidential election was over before entering the negotiations, insisting they would not become an issue in the campaign.

Health For The Working Girl

Pity the poor working girl! Discriminated against in a "man's world," but expected to perform like a soldier and still keep her feminine charms!

It doesn't take long for the average business woman to find out that good health is the key to efficiency and success. And she has lots of hurdles to overcome.

First, the business gal is concerned over how long she will be able to hold her job, whether she can find another one. This insecurity is characteristic of our times.

The second factor is speed. Most business women hurry to work, hurry at work, hurry home, play in a hurry, try to hurry to sleep: but this cannot be done without injury to health.

Third is the lack of exercise; fourth, lack of rest; and the fifth, monotony. What are the results of this kind of life? Nervousness is the most outstanding result, and since the nerve system regulates all functions of the body the worker is liable to suffer from inability to sleep, indigestion, constipation and irritability.

Sounds pretty hopeless? But there is a remedy. There is no reason that the business girl can not be as normal, healthy and charming as any other woman. Here are a few simple rules to remember:

1. There is no substitute for sleep. Try to get at least eight hours a night.
2. Eat three meals a day -a well balanced diet. Lunches on the run will hurt your digestion and your figure.
3. Keep your mind on your posture; make sure it is correct in all daily activities. Your chiropractor can advise you about this key item in your health and beauty program.
4. Pounding a typewriter is not really exercise. Take long walks, try simple setting-up exercises at home, to stimulate circulation and keep you agile and vital.
5. Visit your doctor of chiropractic regularly. He will keep your nerve system operating in top condition.

Roscoe E. Laing, editor of Seattle-based Pacific Builder & Engineer magazine for 30 years, died Jan. 1. He was 69.

Laing's creer as a journalist spanned more than a half century and included a wide range of assignments. He was active for decades not only in printing and publishing i the Northwest, but as a public spokesman for the heavy construction industry, as well.

Laing began his journalism career in 1933 as a free-lance writer for True Detective magazine and scriptwriter for the nationally syndicated radio program, "Gangbuster."

In 1937 he began covering the heavy construction industry in WA., Oregon, Idaho and Montana for Pacific Builder & As a writer and phtographer for the semi-monthly magazine, he covered much of the Northwest's most impressive construction, from Grand Doulee Dam to major highway work.

Minority Viewpoint

Last Monday, standing at the rostrum as the 49th Legislature convened, I sensed a renewed spirit of cooperation and bipartisan commitment such as I have not felt before in my 12 years in public office. Faced by the sobering array of problems that confront us today, we must maintain this kind of positive attitude if we are to make any real headway in solving them.

Reforming our educational system, cleaning up Puget Sound, repairing the workers' compensation program and furthering state economic development are among the immensely difficult tasks facing Washington State. The costs involved in addressing some of these problems cannot be avoided.

At the same time, public expectations are mounting, and rightly so. We are being asked to tackle problems that have been ignored for decades. They are not going to be completely resolved in two years, but solid progress must be made.

The easy way out would be to plead limited financial resources and simply walk away. We can't do that. Education is the key to our economic future. A clean environment is the key to the health and well-being of future generations. And an efficient government that provides public protection and services is a mandate that we must follow year in and year out. We must spend our money wisely, but we cannot talk the problems away.

Working to our advantage in the coming years will be the change in executive branch leadership. Gov. Booth Gardner has kept the most competent adminstrators of the previous administration and hired the "best and brightest" from the private sector and other branches of government.

One of the greatest problems for state lawmakers throughout the nation is the federal deficit and attempts to pare it down. Washington State suffers under high interest rates, caused at least in part by the high federal deficit. but solving the deficit by reducing federal support for medical programs would in turn require states to either cut vital services or find the money to pay for a larger share of the costs.

This uncertainty cannot be resolved until the federal budget is written. Unfortunately, the 1985-86 state biennial budget must be written before work on the federal budget is concluded. Mid-course corrections may be required, but I and a majority in the Democratic Caucus are resolved that no fiscal gimmicks will be used to balance the books.

While direction and leadership must be forthcoming from the new governor and the federal government, the legislature itself must retain the final responsibility for voting budgets and proposed reforms up or down. There is one tool we can give the new governor, however, which will allow him to begin streamlining state government.

For too long, sheer inertia has dictated the makeup of state government agencies and commissions. Changes are fought tooth and nail be special interest groups every time the Legislature begins discussing reforming, merging or eliminating existing government offices.

Now that we have a good manager in the governor's office, we need to give him an oportunity to streamline government and stretch tax dollars further so that we can afford to take action on issues on which the public would like us to work. He can do the job. We need to give him the tools.

The "can-do" attitude which exists today in Olympia will be sorely tested in the coming days. But despite limited financial resources, I think the next two years will see substantial progress made that will make Washington a better place to live and work for years to come.

Hospital executive will head lottery

Mary Faulk, a Tacoma hospita; administrator, has been named to head the Washington State Lottery, sources said last night.

Faulk, who will be appointed by Gov. Booth Gardner, will replace Robert Boyd, who has been the director since the lottery was started in 1982.

Faulk, 41 was a memberpf Gardners's transition team and helped develop the transition budget and plan the move into the Governor's office.

Faulk said she is looking forward to the challenge of heading the struggling lottery system. "Its new and in that way it is chancy", she said.

Faulk said she has no specific plans except to meet her staff and familiarize herself with the basic operations ofs the lottery.

She said hopes to bring an open style of management to the agency.

A formal announcement of Faulk's appointment is expected on Thursday or Friday.

Faulk said she intends to take hard look at different ways of marketing the lottery.

The lottery is facing the possibility of a $2 million operating deficit this year because of the number of winners in various games.

But the lottery is still making money, and as of last November has raised more than $148 million for the State's general fund, according to lottery officials.

Faulk is [illegible] to Larry Faulk, a [illegible] who ran unsuccessfully against Gardner when the latter was elected Pierce County in 1981.
